

CALLER

You are the one who faces the darkness.

You must make difficult choices about what is best for the group. Nothing will work if you do not work as a team.

Functionally, this means:

- » choosing the Turn's Action
- » rolling on the Caller Table
- » trying to guess each Area's Hidden Feature
- » making sure that the interests of the Mapper, the Keeper, and the Seeker are in balance

GAINING XP

Gain XP if everyone arrives alive at the Mapper's first chosen Destination.

LEADERSHIP

Your choices are where the game's interlocking pieces of secrets, maps, and gear come together. Without your daring (and caution), your party risks meaningless death in the dark.

Heed the Seeker and trust the Map, but guard the light.

WAYFINDING

Each time you take the Roll Action, you may forego your Wayfinding roll to instead give a Fortune Token to another player who does not have one.

That player may turn in the Token to shift any die's value up or down by one, on any player's roll, including the GM's Encounter Checks and Reaction Rolls.

Shifts are a manual shift of the die, so that either the 'ones' or the 'tens' die of d66 rolls can be altered: a 36 can be shifted to 35 or to 46, not to 41.

No player may hold more than one Fortune Token at a time.

HIDDEN FEATURES

Some Areas have a Hidden Feature, with a type of Mapper, Keeper, or Seeker. These Hidden Features are usually beneficial.

If your roll on the Caller Table (after Wayfinding is applied) matches that Area's Hidden Feature, the GM will read it out.

This replaces the Player Table rolls this Turn; do not resolve any others.
