

MAPPER

You are the one who makes sense of the darkness.

You must keep the map. Nothing is more important.

Functionally, this means:

- » making the Map upon which your lives depend
- » rolling on the Mapper Table
- » making sure the others understand the terror of becoming Lost (p. 16)

GAINING XP

Gain XP if you map 10 Areas.

MAPMAKING

Make a physical map on paper of where you've been. This is the party's most crucial lifeline.

Note whether you traveled down or up, what the Areas were named, and what you found there.

The map takes up a gear slot, and may be destroyed or lost, so study it. No photos.

Your character has a reliable, durable and unlosable writing device that takes up no gear slots.

WAYFINDING

Each time you take the Roll Action, you may forego your Wayfinding roll to instead Scout Ahead. When you do, choose an adjacent Area. The GM reads its name and the first sentence of its Description.

DESTINATION

Choose a desired Destination toward which you navigate. Some rolls on your Player Table interact with it. The Destination can be

- » a specific location about which you've heard rumors
- » the closest surface exit
- » any Area whose name you know

You can change Destinations any time you roll on your table.

BACKTRACKING

Backtracking and resupplying along known paths is often wise.

Backtracking. If you are offollowing a path you've taken before, in either direction, add 1 Area to your movement on that Turn when taking the Move Action.

KEEPER

You are the one who keeps everyone alive in the darkness.

You must safeguard your light and food. Nothing matters if you can't get back out.

Functionally, this means:

- » keeping track of the party's light and food
- » rolling on the Keeper Table
- » making sure the others understand the danger of darkness, and how many torches it takes to get home

GAINING XP

Gain XP if you roll on the Treasure Table 3 times.

GEAR MANAGEMENT

List. List light sources and rations, and who carries them.

When you mark resource use, note from whose gear it comes. It may matter when flipping to your main game.

Torches. When flipping to your main game, state who is carrying the light. It has 1d6x10 minutes of light remaining. When flipping back to Undercrawl, any torch with 30 minutes or more on it lasts the full Turn.

WAYFINDING

Each time you take the Roll Action, you may forego your Wayfinding roll to instead Cache Gear in your current Area. There is a 5:6 chance the cache is still there each time you return.

BE PREPARED

Better to have it and not need it than need it and not have it.

Without. Your table lists consequences for being without certain things. This means if your party is without it, not your character.

RESOURCE USE

Light. Use 1 torch or cast 1 Light Spell per Turn.

Darkness. If you run out of light sources, you roll on the Lost Table (p. 16). It's very bad.

Food. Use 1 ration per player every 6 Undercrawl Turns. Use a d6 (the Hunger Die) to count down the Turns.

Hunger. When the Hunger Die reaches 1, you must eat or suffer 1d4 CON DMG. Reset the die.

CALLER

You are the one who faces the darkness.

You must make difficult choices about what is best for the group. Nothing will work if you do not work as a team.

Functionally, this means:

- » choosing the Turn's Action
- » rolling on the Caller Table
- » trying to guess each Area's Hidden Feature
- » making sure that the interests of the Mapper, the Keeper, and the Seeker are in balance

GAINING XP

Gain XP if everyone arrives alive at the Mapper's first chosen Destination.

LEADERSHIP

Your choices are where the game's interlocking pieces of secrets, maps, and gear come together. Without your daring (and caution), your party risks meaningless death in the dark.

Heed the Seeker and trust the Map, but guard the light.

WAYFINDING

Each time you take the Roll Action, you may forego your Wayfinding roll to instead give a Fortune Token to another player who does not have one.

That player may turn in the Token to shift any die's value up or down by one, on any player's roll, including the GM's Encounter Checks and Reaction Rolls.

Shifts are a manual shift of the die, so that either the 'ones' or the 'tens' die of d66 rolls can be altered: a 36 can be shifted to 35 or to 46, not to 41.

No player may hold more than one Fortune Token at a time.

HIDDEN FEATURES

Some Areas have a Hidden Feature, with a type of Mapper, Keeper, or Seeker. These Hidden Features are usually beneficial.

If your roll on the Caller Table (after Wayfinding is applied) matches that Area's Hidden Feature, the GM will read it out.

This replaces the Player Table rolls this Turn; do not resolve any others.

CALLER	D6
1-2	Mapper
3-4	Keeper
5-6	Seeker

SEEKER

You are the one who gives meaning to the darkness.

You must find what the darkness hides. Nothing matters if you learn nothing.

Functionally, this means:

- » choosing and asking meaningful questions
- » rolling on the Seeker Table

GAINING XP

Gain XP if you learn the answers to your 3 Questions.

QUESTIONS

Each Undercrawl, the party should agree on 3 Questions whose answers they seek.

Present these Questions to the GM at the beginning of the Undercrawl. The GM may place limits on them. The GM's answers will be helpful, but may also be obscure, or lead to further questions.

Use a d6 (the Seeker Die) to count down from 6. Each Turn that the action is Roll, count it down. At 1, ask one of your questions. The GM answers. Reset the die.

WAYFINDING

Each time you take the Roll Action, you may forego your Wayfinding roll to instead Seek out the Secrets. The GM reveals whether this Area has a Secret Feature. Then, roll a d6:

- » 1-3: You will never find it.
- » 4-6: You find it.

SEEKER TABLE

You can seek many kinds of things.

LOCAL KNOWLEDGE

A clue reveals something about the closest Dungeon's...

LOST LORE

A fragment of an old object reveals something about...

SECRET PASSAGE

The GM creates a new passage on the map from this Area. It is...

MYSTERIES

Inexplicable phenomena at home in the dark.

DVERDAGHAR

Learn one of the secrets kept by the dark halls of the Underking. (GM: see p. 34.)

CHOICES

Choose wisely.
